Updated: FMRTE 14.1.5 is now available. Look.. CrackHand held or hand-held writing instruments are well known in the art. For example, see U.S. Pat. No. 2,535,037 to Zelik; U.S. Pat. No. 3,919,104 to Jones; U.S. Pat. No. 4,192,923 to Morrow et al.; U.S. Pat. No. 4,405,096 to Simon and U.S. Pat. No. 5,311,742 to Covert et al. In general, the prior art hand held or hand-held writing instruments are rather complex, bulky, have inaccurate or inconsistent marks, are of substantial size, and require two or more hands to write or draw. Additionally, hand held writing instruments typically require the user to purchase and assemble a writing instrument at a point of sale. For example, a user must purchase the components of a writing instrument, such as a ball point tip, a stationery pencil, and a writing surface at a point of sale and assemble the writing instrument. If the stationery pencil and writing surface are sold separately, the user is required to purchase and assemble the writing instrument at a point of sale. Accordingly, there is a need for an improved writing instrument that is compact, accurate, easily assembled, and does not require any tools for assembly. Additionally, there is a need for a writing instrument that is an integrated stationery pencil and writing surface.Description Call
